It is my hope that after watching this video, you will have a general understanding of how affiliate marketing mainly works, what niches are and how to pick the right one for yourself, how to create SEO content and how to market your content to potential customers. Following all the tips and tricks from this video should set you well on your way towards becoming a well-established and serious affiliate marketer with a bright future on the horizon for you.

WHAT IS A LEAD MAGNET: A lead magnet is a marketing term for a free item or service that is given away for the purpose of gathering contact details; for example, lead magnets can be trial subscriptions, samples, white papers, e-newsletters, and free consultations. Marketers use lead magnets to create sales leads.

WHAT IS AFFILIATE MARKETING

Affiliate marketing is an advertising model in which a company pays others (e.g., bloggers) to advertise their products and services and generate sales. Affiliates place ads or market the products or services on their website, app, or blog. Commissions are paid on leads that convert to sales.

If you want to do affiliate marketing, finding a profitable niche should be your first priority. Choosing a specific niche market makes it easier to connect with advertisers and sponsors. Also, it gives your marketing efforts more focus and enables you to expand your audience quickly.

When novice affiliate marketers start searching for a niche, they often assume that they need to find a little-known market, or that profitable niches will be ones that other marketers are not currently involved with. After all, the most popular industries and topics are the preserve of established publications, which invest large sums of money each month into content creation, outreach and SEO. Websites like Healthline or WebMD, for instance, have the marketing budgets to hire teams of freelance writers to produce health-related content. In addition, they spend thousands of dollars on link building, paid promotions and other advertising methods. Suffice to say, competing with these brands would be impossible for the average marketer.

Notwithstanding, the best market niches to target are, in fact, the mainstream niches. These marketing niches currently have competition, high demand, proven longevity, plenty of findable customers, and numerous related products, social media groups, forums and websites. In the unlikely event that you find a niche that other affiliates have overlooked, this is typically because the demand is low – so customers are few and far between – and because the number of products available to promote is limited. That would be a challenge for a seasoned marketer, never mind a beginner.

You can build a successful website and stand out from the crowd by focusing on an industry sub-niche, such as 'health tips for seniors' or 'healthy living for families' – to reference the above health niche example. This way, you can use long tail keywords – that are passed over by the larger publications – to bring search engine traffic to your website and generate affiliate sales. This is a more sensible approach, because the niche is evergreen so you already know that there are profits to be made. Here's how to find a profitable niche for affiliate marketing in seven easy steps.

How to Find a Profitable Niche for Affiliate Marketing in Seven Easy Steps

1) Consider Your Own Interests and Pastimes

When it comes to finding niches, the logical place to begin is with the things that interest you personally. In all likelihood, you already spend money on these things so you understand the mindset of customers. You just have to determine whether they are viable as an online business.

2) Identify Potential Monetization Options Within the Niche

It is always wise to select a niche that has several monetization options, so you can establish multiple streams of income. This spreads your risk and ensures that you will stay in business, if one of your affiliate accounts is closed. Begin by evaluating the competition and note what monetization methods they are using. Conduct a Google search for your primary topic, then look at the top ten to fifteen websites that appear in the results. Ideally, you want these sites to be monetized with sponsored content, Google ads, Amazon products and their own membership areas, etc.

3) Assess the Competition and Search Volume for the Niche

As already stated, niches with little competition are best avoided, because this usually means that the profit potential is limited. It is important not to confuse niche analysis with keyword research, which is an easy mistake to make.

4) Gauge the Number of Traffic Sources Available

The importance of this step can not be overstated. You must determine whether your niche has a diverse range of traffic sources, because this is critical for the stability of your online business. The best way to establish this is to look at the top websites in your proposed niche, to see where they get their traffic from.

5) Search for Market Deficiencies You Can Exploit

To profit from the niche you enter, you have to provide superior website content to the other websites in your niche. To do this, you should determine where the content produced by your competitors falls short, and devise ways to enhance it.

Check for Previously Sold Websites or Profitable Acquisitions

A fairly reliable yardstick of a niche's merit is the quantity of successful businesses or websites in it. If eCommerce stores, blogs and other websites in your niche are being purchased regularly, it indicates there is profit potential.

7) Decide What Your USP Is

Prior to making your final decision about what niche to base your affiliate website on, there is one last thing to consider. What will be your original angle? How will you separate yourself from the countless other websites online? How can you make people remember you? In niches that have lots of competition, this issue is especially pertinent.
